

Continue

Whether you need drafts for your personal blog or HQ audio for your company's website, we have a time-saving solution for you. StockPop Mega Bundle makes finding these stock assets wind up, and although a lifetime subscription typically retails for $699, it is now available for an astonishing 94 percent for just $24.99 trying to hunt down professional stock photos often feels like finding a needle in a haystack. And once you find the perfect photo, you'll have to worry about copyright and whether you can legally use the image. StockPop save you valuable time and worry by providing exactly what you need through its private collection of more than 17,000 copyright-free images. In addition to photos, StockPop also boasts an impressive collection of HD video and HQ audio files to highlight your web projects. You never have to worry about copyright, and the StockPop library is neatly organized into handy categories to make finding and finding the perfect asset easy and enjoyable. Social Media subscription to StockPop Mega Bundle for just $24.99 here. Related articles: The Baron Asset Fund recently disclosed its second-quarter commentary - a copy of which can be downloaded here. Baron Asset Fund returned 28.02% (institutional shares) during the second quarter of 2020. By comparison, the benchmark S&P 500 index rose 30.26%, while the Russell Midcap growth index rose 30.26%. You should check out the Baron Asset Fund in the top 5 stock choices for investors to buy right now, which could be the biggest winners of the stock market crash. In the said letter, the Baron Asset Fund allocated several shares and Wix.com Ltd. (NASDAQ:WIX) is one of them. Wix.com Ltd. (NASDAQ:WIX) provides cloud web development services. For the year, Wix.com Ltd. (NASDAQ:WIX) shares gained 143.4% and a closing price of $294.23 on July 10. Here's what the Baron Asset Fund said: Wix.com Ltd. provides small businesses with software that allows them to create and maintain their websites. The company is a leader in its market, with more than 170 million registered users and nearly 5 million premium users. Wix shares rose significantly during the quarter as its business benefited from an accelerating pace of creation and modernization of small businesses or its websites, driven in part by widespread business disruptions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. We remain optimistic about our investment as we continue to expand its platform to target professional website builders and agencies in addition to its core customers. We believe that these efforts, together with the new products under consideration, will meaningfully expand the Wix address market. [signature ID :ratshachemr_518922 align=right|center width=400] Legal regulation: mspolmemr_1238F Stock Photo/caption/abstract, background, blue, blur, boke, building, business, businessman, mobile phone, mobile phone, chat, city, cloud, computing, computer, computing, concept, concept, display, filter, filter, stream, graphics, hand, icon, illustration, internet, laptop, light, mail, media, men, mobile, network, network, night, PC, people, phone, plant, pouring out of hat hedge funds per share Wix.com Ltd. (NASDAQ:WIX) declined about 12% from the previous quarter (see chart here), as a number of other hedge fund managers don't seem to agree with the potential Wix.com Our calculations showed that Wix.com Ltd. (NASDAQ:WIX) is not among the 30 most popular stocks among hedge funds. The top 10 stocks among hedge funds have returned 125% since late 2014 and outperformed the S&P 500 ETFs index by more than 100 percentage points. We know it sounds incredible. You reject our article about leading hedge fund stocks largely because you have been fed biased information by other media outlets about the poor performance of hedge funds. You could double the size of your nesting egg by investing in top hedge fund stocks instead of dumb S&M&A P 500 ETFs. Below you can watch our video about the top 5 hedge fund stocks right now. All of these stocks had a positive return in 2020. Video: Top 5 stocks among hedge funds! AI Insider Monkey we scour multiple sources to uncover the best great investment idea. There is a lot of volatility in the markets and this presents amazing investment opportunities from time to time. For example, this trader claims to deliver juicy returns with one trade a week, so we test his highest conviction idea. The second trader claims to estimate profit using the weekend trading strategy. So we are looking at choosing this strategy. We read letters from hedge fund investors and listen to stock platforms at hedge fund conferences. We recently recommended several shares, partly inspired by the legendary letter from investor Bill Miller. Our best call in 2020 was a shorted market when S&M&A P 500 was trading at 1,150 in February after realizing the significance of the coronavirus pandemic. In fact of most investors. You can subscribe to our free newsletter below to get our stories in your inbox. Disclosure: No. This article originally published on Insider Monkey. (Bloomberg) - Alibaba Group Holding Ltd. has had a second day of frenzied sales among China's largest technology firms, spooked by fears that antitrust scrutiny will spread beyond Jack Ma's internet empire and cover the country's most powerful corporations. Alibaba and its three biggest rivals - Tencent Holdings Ltd., food delivery giant Meituan and JD.com Inc. - have shed nearly $200 billion over two sessions since Thursday, when regulators revealed investigations into alleged monopoly practices at Ma's branded company. This marked the formal start of the Communist Party's crackdown not only on Alibaba but also, potentially, the wider and increasingly technological sphere. On Sunday, the central bank ordered another online loan - Ant Air Co. - return to its roots as a payment service and overhaul related businesses from insurance to money management, pushing up talk of a possible govt. Once standard bearers of China's economic and technological rise, Alibaba and its competitors now face growing pressure from regulators concerned about the speed at which they accumulate influence in sensitive arenas such as media and education, and gaining exposure to the daily lives of hundreds of millions. That concern crystallized in November, when regulators suspended Ant's initial public offering of $35 billion before unveiling a draft rule establishing sweeping powers to clamp down on anticompetitive practices in sectors from e-commerce to social media. Alibaba fell 8% on Monday in Hong Kong, shed $270 billion in value since its October peak. Tencent and Meituan both fell more than 6%. Rival Alibaba JD.com Inc. slid about 2%. The Chinese government is putting more pressure on or wants to have more control over technology firms. Jackson Wong, director of asset management at Amber Hill Capital Ltd., said by telephone. There is still very much selling pressure on firms such as Alibaba, Tencent or Meituan. These companies are growing at a pace that Beijing considers too fast and have scales that are too great. It is unclear what concessions regulators may try to unseat from Alibaba. Under existing antitrust law - not undergoing changes for the first time - Beijing can fine violators up to 10% of their income. In Alibaba's case, that could mean a $7.6 billion fine. China's e-commerce leader on Monday raised a proposed $4 billion share buyback program to $10 billion, effective for two years to the end of 2022. But the buyback program has been overwhelmed by fears the steps taken against Ant are just the tip of the iceberg. While the central bank has stopped calling for a meltdown, the financial services giant now needs to present specific measures and a timetable for restoring its business. Read more: Ant firms from Weibo fall to a nightmare for global investors? The state-owned market sent officials to Alibaba's headquarters in Hangzhou last Thursday and at the scene the investigation was completed on the day, according to local news reports. The People's Daily - a mouthpiece of the Communist Party - ran a comment at the weekend warning Alibaba's peers to take an antitrust investigation against Alibaba as a chance to pull off their own awareness of far competition. Ma, the founder of Alibaba and Ant, has all but disappeared from the public's perspective since Ant's IPO was delayed last month. As of early December, the person most closely identified with China's meteoric rise was advised by the government to stay in the country, a person familiar with the matter said. Ma is not on the verge of personal downfall, those familiar with the situation said. His very public rebuke of the rebuke warning Beijing has not assuaged the power of its tech moguls, increasingly perceived as a threat to political and financial stability. Chinese President Xi Jinping has the most power. Investors remain divided over the volume to which Beijing will follow in the footsteps of Alibaba and its competitors as Beijing prepares to roll out new antitrust rules. The country's leaders have said little about how tough they plan to clamp down on or why they chose to do so. Some analysts predict that a crack is coming, but focused. They point to language in rules that indicate a heavy focus on online commerce, from forced exclusive arrangements with sellers known as Select One of Two to price-based algorithms preferred by new users. Regulations specifically warn against plundering prices - selling below cost - to lure rivals. As the latest investigation comes to a time when China is willing to take action against monopoly practices, we believe the SAMR may want to use the BABA case as a precedent to send a message to the rest of the industry that power is determined this time to address pricing. Nomura analysts wrote in a note Monday. For more articles like this, please visit us at Bloomberg.com/subscribe now. ©2020 Bloomberg LP. Investor's Business Daily/futures as President Trump signed the stimulus agreement. Elon Musk says Tesla is near a historic time off. Apple shares flash the purchase sign. How much do you get - and when can you expect money? Enter this year. Berkshire Hathaway three big heavyweight names behind Barrick Gold with an investment that flew in the gold market, and one strategist at the time. Payments of $600 are in the works now. But the president still hopes for $2,000 worth of checks. With 2020 winding up, there is a growing belief that 2021 will be a year of growth for stock markets. The US election has brought back a divided government that is unlikely to have the broad majorities - or broad support - needed to introduce wide-ranging reform legislation on the right or left, and it is a good fit for the economy as a whole. Vaccines against COVID are entering distribution, and while new are virus lockdowns are also set in place, there is a feeling that the end of the pandemic may be near. According to the analytical community, several names reflect serious growth plays. These are stocks that are already noting impressive full-year-to-date earnings, and are poised to see growth keep coming even after 2020 wraps up. With this in mind, we used the Tiptopia database to scan the street for the presence of firms that fall into this category. By 1, in particular, analysts believe that each name, which also boasts may keep the rally alive in 2021. SunOpta (STKL)The first stock on this growth list is snack company SunOpta. The company's product line includes herbal drinks, fruit snacks, broth and stocks, teas, souflours and feed snacks. The company markets through private label and co-production distribution, as well as through direct options. SunOpta boasts a market cap of $662 million, after a year of staggering share price growth. The stock is up an impressive 328% this year, well ahead of overall markets. The company's revenue in Q3 was $314.9 million, up 6.4% year-over-year. EPS, with a net loss of 1 cent, was better than the expected 2-p-cent loss - and far better than the 11-p-cent loss reported in the quarter a year ago. The company's solid performance caught the attention of Craig-Hallum analyst Alex Fuhrman. The analyst estimates STKL is a buy along with a price target of $15. This figure suggests one year upside down 40% of current levels. (To watch Fuhrman's track record, click here) Based on his position, Fuhrman writes: We believe that the company's focus on the high cost of herbal food and beverages should command a premium assessment with upside-down opportunities as the economy recovers from COVID. To a large extent, Fuhrman's optimism is based on the SunOpta niche. Analyst said: We expect faster food companies for the foreseeable future as green faster growth trends and compelling environmental benefits. For just $4.58 in sales today, herbal products make up less than 1% of the $695B grocery market, but it's easy to imagine that this represents a double-digit share of product sales over time. Wall Street doesn't always get ed up in unanimity, but in this case it does. SunOpta Strong Buy's consensus rating is unanimous, based on 3 Buy reviews. The shares are on sale for $10.70, and with an average price target of $15, SunOpta has a forward growth potential of 40%. (See STKL stock analysis on Tiptopia) Green Brick Partners (GRBK)One of the bright spots in the economy has been the housing construction industry. When people moved out of cities to avoid COVID, they headed to the suburbs and exurbs - and this boosted demand for single-family homes. Green Brick is a Texas-based land development and acquisition company. The company invests in real estate, primarily land, and then provides plots and construction financing for development projects. The spread of the suburbs - not just the COVID year, but as a general trend, was good for Green Brick. The company's revenue in Q3 was $275.8 million, the best for more than a year, beating the forecast by 20% and growing 11% year-over-year. EPS was also strong: Q3 value, 68 cents, was 50% above expectations, and more than double the cost a year ago. Green Brick's share price is rising along with the company's financial prospects. GRBK gained 111% during the year. In JMP analyst Aaron Hecht said: [W]e expect GRBK GRBK to be the next moving apartment trends into single-family homes for safety and changing dynamics that have driven more telecommunications workers. The most important stock IRR inside the buyer pool is millennials who will come off the roads to buy homes, a trend we believe has several years of runway. The inferred demand trend is increasing in a risk's case given its undiscovered impact on markets like Texas and Atlanta, which are net beneficiaries of migration from high-value coastal geographies. To that end, Hecht estimates GRBK's Outperform (i.e. Buy), and its $2 price target involves upside down -23% over the next 12 months. (To watch Hecht's track record, click here) While it's not unanimous, we have Strong Buy consensus rating on Green Brick is crucial, with a breakdown of 3 of 10 buys against hold. The average price target of $27.5 gives a 12.5% upside potential from the current share price of $24.45. (See GRBK stock analysis on Tiptopia) Brightcove, Inc. (BCOV)By moving transfers to the software industry, we come to Brightcove, a Boston-area software company. Brightcove offers a wide range of video platform products, including cloud hosting and social and interactive applications. The company is a leader in the delivery and monetization of cloud online video solutions. The strength of such a business model, in these pandemic days with their mass displacement of white-collar workers toward remote offices, telecommunications and video conferencing, is evident. Brightcove's profit hit 11 cents per share in the third quarter, nearly double that of the quarter a year ago. At the top line, revenues were stable, holding between $46 million and $48 million per quarter in 2020, with no discernible impact of COVID. Shares in Brightcove have been on the steps in 2020, with a slight slip last winter. The pace has accelerated since the end of July, following the release of Q2 results, with shares now up 103% for 2020. Common macro headlines are turning into video niche tailwinds, said Northland Capital analyst Michael Latimore. We believe the market tailwind, BCOV's leading technology platform, and strong sales performance are driving strong bookings. We believe salesforce is at full performance. BCOV will add more channel managers this year. Management is focused on growing processes to achieve consistency of revenue retention rates, said the 5-year analyst. Latimore rates the stock as Outperform (i.e. Buy), and its $24 price target indicates confidence of 36% upside down for the year ahead. (To watch Latimer's track record, click here) Over the past 3 months, two other analysts have thrown their hat with a look at the tech company's video. Buy's two additional ratings provide Brightcove with a consensus Strong Buy rating. With an average price target of $20.17, investors stand to take home a 14% return if the target is met over the coming months. (See stock analysis on Tiptopia) To find good ideas for trading stocks growth or attractive valuations, visit our The best stocks to buy, a recently launched tool that brings together all Tiptopia equity ideas. Disclaimer: The opinions expressed in our articles are solely opinions with signs from analysts. Content is intended for informational purposes only. It is very important to do your own analysis before making any investment. Chinese e-commerce company and tech behemoth Alibaba Group Holdings Ltd (NYSE: BABA) were down 6.67% in Hong Kong as of press time on Monday. The company then announced plans to raise the share buyback threshold by an additional $4 billion. What happened? Alibaba's share buyback program will now target a $10 billion buyback by the end of 2022, 67% higher than the $6 billion limit previously. The larger magnitude of the buyback limit comes at a time when Alibaba shares have taken a hit because of anti-competitive probes from Chinese authorities. China's State Administration for Market Regulation, the country's market regulator, confirmed last week that it was checking Alibaba's trade policy, which requires sellers to either exclusively operate its platform or chose a competing service. After Thursday's crash, Alibaba's shares returns a year before the date were cut to a 1.46% gain. Why it matters: The antitrust investigation comes after comments by Alibaba co-founder Jack Ma about China's financial system and lack of innovation. The initial public offering of Alibaba-backed Ant Group was halted, following a probe about a month ago. Chinese authorities on Sunday instructed the subsidiary to focus on its core payment services business, all the while focusing on wealth management, insurance and lending business Ant. Price action: BABA shares closed 13.34% lower at $222 last Thursday. See Also: Why China has cut Jack Ma's Ant IPO hopes Explain/Photo by NGS9F2 reports on Wikimedia/Wiki more from Benzinga * Click here for bidding options from Benzinga * Alibaba facial recognition technology specifically capable of detecting Uighurs, report claims * China's tech crackdown is gaining momentum: Tencent-led Douyin, Huya Meng(O) 2020 Benzinga.com Benzinga does not provide investment advice. All rights reserved. Analysts prefer companies that supply EV manufacturers or develop technologies to support infrastructure and autonomous driving. Alibaba Group Holding Ltd. upgraded its share buyback program late Sunday from $6 billion to $10 billion, but shares still sank in Hong Kong amid an antitrust investigation by Chinese regulators. Now the bad news - Aside from the expected Social Security (approximately $1,300/month), if I was still full retirement age, $1,200/month if I retire at 65. I don't have a pension or other income streams - I do not have an impressive resume of work, which can lead to profitable employment or retirement. Is there any way I can make $500,000 in savings and, especially given the undoubtedly low interest rate means I'll need to invest. Determining how quickly losses return to their origins after hitting bottoms. According to Wire, because Lidar sees much more detail than radar, it can do... can be capable of driving losses return to their origins after hitting bottoms. This probably explains why Lidar is now considered an integral part of autonomous vehicles and lidar stocks are attracting attention. And with many automakers, including Ford (NYSE: F), GM (NYSE:GM), BMW (NYSE:BMW) and Honda (NYSE:HMC), looking intensely at developing autonomous and semi-autonomous vehicles, Lidar is becoming more profitable. In addition, noting that major auto equipment manufacturers Bosch and Valeo (NYSE:VLEO) have begun developing Lidar, and Technica recently proclaimed: Lidar sensors are about to become the car's main feature. Research firm Lucintel said Lidar is used in sport detection, adaptive cruise control, parking assistance and pedestrian detection systems. He predicted that revenue from automotive detection and the sensor market would have a challenging annual growth rate of 17% through 2023 and 2025. In the sector, Lidar's popularity is expanding faster than average, the firm said. InvestorPlace - Stock Markets and Stocks Market News. Stock Advice &amp; Trading Tips - Undervalued Stocks That Could Soar in 2021 These Lidar Stocks are exceptionally well positioned for this trend. Collective Growth Corp. (NASDAQ:CGRO) Valeo (NYSE:VLEO) Technica (NYSE:TECH) Collective Growth Corp. (NASDAQ:CGRO) - A special-purpose acquisition company that plans to team up with Israel's Innoveo Technologies, which develops lidar sensors. Among the

